Everyone Can Work on Kubernetes

Yang Li (@idealhack), The Plant K.K.

Syllogism

- Everyone can work on open source projects
- Kubernetes is one of the largest
- Everyone can work on Kubernetes

Okay, But Why?

Mom: Dad said you invented a thing? ESLint?
Me: Yes.
Mom: What is it?
Me: It finds and fixes problems in JavaScript.
Mom: Huh. Do people use it?
Me: Basically everyone writing JS.
Mom: How much did you make on it?
Me: Nothing.
Mom: I don't understand your industry.
Me: Me either.

Point being: attitudes towards open source are still very fragmented. As an industry, we need to come together to figure out how we value OSS and how we will support it.

And yes, this was an actual conversation between Mom and me. I only shortened the sentences to make it fit.

Yesterday was peak burnout for me. I'll still be pushing sigs.k8s.io/kind forward with @JamesMunnelly and others, but probably much less active in other places. Parts of this org are just too soul-sucking 😕

Thanks everyone for the support and for the advice from everyone who reached out, I really appreciate it, and the healthy conversations around burnout going on here. Y'all are the best. ❤️

I'm taking some steps to avoid future burnout, starting with
